J-Pop Fashion Week

Photos taken at the J-Pop fashion walk in Japantown. These are whimsical photos to display the Akihabara and Harajuku styles. These were taken with a Nikon D90 and processed with Photoshop. I wanted to capture the bright colors and wild styles of fashion with the low angles and curves adjustments. There was low light at the time and I used Photoshop to compensate for a lot of the off colors.

Tsukiji Sushi Restaurant

Taken at the Tsukiji Fish Market, a chef cuts the tuna in preparation of making sushi for customers. The fish just came off the boat and is as fresh as can be. The photo is taken with a Nikon D90 with RAW setting and adjustments were made using Photoshop. This was a very spontaneous photo but I feel that it came out very well. There is a good action with the cutting of the fish, the customers in the back and the subtle angle of the framing. There is little that is overblown and little that is too dark and not much processing was required.

Muir Beach at Sunset

I wanted to capture a surreal moment on the beach with low lighting and a reflective water. There is a glint of red in the horizon. I chose HDR to keep the dark details while making the light details still pop. I wanted to make a surreal memory rather than a traditional photograph. I feel that the difference is this is packed with emotion and longing and a traditional photo just depicts. This is taken with a Nikon D90 with 3 exposures +2, 0, and -2.

Noh Theater at Yasukuni

This is a 3 exposure photo of the Yasukuni Shrine at Jimbocho in Tokyo, Japan. The photos were merged using Photomatix and touch up with Photoshop. The aim of this is to capture the traditional Noh theater and Japanese culture and to pay respect to my Japanese roots. The saturation of the red and blues and the deeply detailed woodwork is brought out to symbolize what we as people get from nature and bring back to nature.

Tug Boat Hercules at Hyde Street Pier

A Panoramic view of the tug boat Hercules from the Hyde Street Pier. 3 exposure values and Photomerge in Photoshop and Photomatix. This image puts the red tug boat in a kind of clash with the blue sky. The distortion of perspective and the combination of rich saturated colors makes for a high impact and animated image. This is a hyper real photo and a kind of experiment in combining HDR & panoramas.

Battery Yates at Fort Baker

A photomerge HDR image taken at Fort Baker in Marin County. Three exposures +2, 0, and -2 with raw settings, processed with Photoshop and Photomatix. The main focus is on the interesting battery and the rusty and decayed textures, less emphasis is on the bridge which you can only see half of. There is a dynamic sky and very detailed grass and other textures. There are several leading lines in this composition that lead to the bridge and back.

San Francisco City Hall

San Francisco City Hall is an old building that houses the city functions. Designed by Arthur Brown and built in 1915 this building is a Beaux Arts revival style building. It mimics the American Capitol Building. This also symbolizes the crowning achievement in the westward expansion of the American Empire. In 2010 the San Francisco Giants baseball team won the world series and banners were hung outside city hall to celebrate that historic win.

Queensboro Bridge

These photos were taken at the Queensboro Bridge in New York. Famous for being mentioned in the Great Gatsby. The bridge was recently renamed the Ed Koch Queensboro bridge, however most locals resent the new name. The resentment comes from the fact that it sounds similar to David Koch's rename of the Lincoln Center and that Koch has interesting Freudian interpretations.

Independence Hall

Independence Hall, where the American Empire broke ways with the British Empire in a way. Destiny intervened and the British and Americans found out that they were never meant to be apart they were meant to be allies for the long haul. Fighting together through many wars, the British and Americans formed a huge international corporate alliance. This building is surprising for its modesty.

The True Cost of Chevron

A magazine spread highlighting the pollution caused by energy giant Chevron. Done with Photomatix and Photoshop, I used a Nikon D90 to take the photos used a multiple exposure background of Lake Merritt and photo processed photos of Richmond, Martinez and Mare Island to complete the layout. The images were overlaid using 3D objects in Photoshop, using layer styles and adjusting curves and color balance to achieve a unified feel to the piece.

WHO DO WE WORK WITH?

We carry cell phones compatible with Verizon, Sprint, AT&T and T Mobile.

We are an authorized dealer so we can set up your service with your carrier and sell phones pre-equipped to work right out of the store.

We will help you choose what service and provider is best for your needs, we make the complex contracts simple and because we aren't tied down to one company we can work with you to customize a plan that will work for you.

Our commitment is not to any one company and we won't pressure you into signing a contract.

If you choose to go with your own provider we can sell you a no contract phone with no obligation at the lowest price possible.

If you decide to go with a contract we will sell you a phone at the lowest allowable subsidized price possible.
